- SEAS students typically take several major courses to stay on track for graduation sequence.
- Students from SEAS can apply to a College program and earn College credit.
 - Students on these programs would not be able to take subjects that fall into Wharton's realm (i.e., finance, accounting) or SEAS areas (i.e., computer science, mechanical engineering).
 - All SEAS students seek study abroad approval from SEAS, regardless of if they are studying on a SEAS-approved program or a College-approved program.
- On XCAT, Penn's External Credit Approval Tool, students search for pre-approved classes ("precedents") for a particular host university or submit a new syllabus for approval.
